Abstract of the Disclosure

A configurable software system for automatically storing and indexing computer files. Information about the usage characteristics of a computer file are compared against a second set of data, for example, a schedule of events with dates, times, etc. If this 5   comparison results in a match, data from the second set are associated with the computer file. Data resulting from such associations are stored and searchable.